Small Birds Are Often Two Miles High.

Descriptions Show That In Their Mi grations They Travel From Africa to Helgoland at Rate of 180 Miles an Hour.

The great problem of how small airds were able to manage long flights from other countries exercised the minds of naturalists for centuries. The rat man to collect accurate information on the subject was the late Herr Gatke. Living on the little Island of Heigoland, in the direct route of migration, and entirely devoted to his subject, he was able to verify for himself many facts which had until then escaped notice.

For instance, he pointed out that birds on migration often flew very high-probably as much as 12,000 feet (over two miles) above the ground. That they do fly at a great height has been corroborated by astronomers, who have seen birds flying across the face of the moon at a height of not less than one mile.

Gatke's idea on speed were probably exaggerated, but only by a theory of a tremendous swift flight at a high altitude could be account for the fact that certain birds were never, or rarely, seen in the countries between their winter and summer quarters. For instance, he pointed out that the blue throat, which winters in Africa and breeds in Scandinavia, is but rarely met with in any of the countries on the line line of route-Italy, Greece and southern Germany.

When they arrived at Helgoland they came in large flocks and were tired and exhausted; also they always arrived at the same hour-somewhat late in the morning. He thought it probable that they left Africa at dusk the previous evening, and by flying at the rate of 180 miles an hour would be able to reach Helgoland in the one association granted some money to a pecial committee for the study of migration, and by means of schedules nuch information was collected about the birds that are killed annually at cured her in two weeks. Will help coast lights. Although many facts you. Only 25c. Recommended by were thus obtained the observations n this respect are almost entirely dependent on weather conditions. In act, it may be said that the only migration that can be actually seen is that which has partly failed, for it is only when delayed or held back by storms or fog that birds obviously on passage are encountered along the oast or in other places where they are not usually found.

In Denmark and Germany ornithologists have been experimenting by ringing birds and having those that are caught returned to the address given on the aluminum band placed on the bird's leg.

In this way the habits or migration, speed and direction of flight and other facts are discovered. Storks have given the most striking results from ringing. Without exception all storks that have been recovered in the first autumn after ringing had traveled in a due southeasterly direction.

From Hungaria to Palestine no ringed birds have been procured, but from Palestine four have been returned, from Alexandria one, Blue Nile one, Victoria Nyanza one and no fewer than seven from the Transvaal, Natal. Best Laxative for the Aged Basutoland, etc., while of the Hungarian storks (marked by the Hungarian office) no fewer than seventeen have been recorded from the various but it must be safe and harmless and localities in South Africa. It is, therefore, practically certain that north German and Hungarian storks travel southeast to Palestine and thence due good for the aged, for they act south to South Africa.

Miracle of Memory.

A petal fell from a rose in a bou quet which a delicate girl was carrying through the street and fluttered towards the ground, and just then the muddy boot of an old cleaner of the streets got in its way, and with the dew of its own life it attached itself to the humble covering of humble feet, and later when the man glanced down and saw it, he smiled at the incongruousness. And as he smiled, this crude and homely mind settled itself upon the dainty petal and with a passing breeze of fancy was borne away from the artificial grandeur of the city, across the fields and rivers and mountains, and while his feet still trod the stony street, his soul was in the little old-home cottage where his boyhood was spent, and he stood under the old rose bush which hung over the door, and he lifted up his arms and took great masses of bloom into their embrace, and buried his face in their glory, and the tired old man was a boy again. And yet they say there are no miracles today! -Universalist Leader.

About Candles. Candles which have been frozen will burn longer than those which have not. If candles are too large for the sockets for which they are in tended, hold the ends in hot wate: for about one-quarter of a minute then press into the sockets of the candle-holders. If, however, the old method of cutting away the ends is employed, be sure the shavings are kept. They are excellent for cleaning the top of the range. When the stove is warm, sprinkle with candle shavings, and as they melt, rub the stove with a rag. The rag will ab
